Look at this picture.

What kind of a place do you like - a place like this or a place full of trees?
What happened to the trees?
Who is responsible for this?
How can we make our earth more green?
Let's begin by drawing branches, twigs and leaves.
Then colour the picture.
Now, read the story of a king who loved plants and trees.

The Worry

Vidyadhara was the king of Gandhara. He was a just and wise king.

The king was fond of gardening. He spent a lot of time tending his garden, planting the finest plants, fruit trees, vegetables and crops.

His people were very happy. The king did not have children. As the king grew older, everyone got more and more worried.

Who would take over the kingdom after him?

What was the hobby of the king?

'The king did not have any children.' What will happen to the kingdom?

How will the king find his successor?

A Proclamation

To find a successor, the king thought of an idea. He decided, 'I will distribute some seeds to all the children in the country.' The child who grows the biggest, healthiest plant will become the prince or the princess. They can take three months for it.'

The king ordered his minister to give a proclamation.

Why did the king choose such a test to find his successor?

Seed of Hope

The next day, a long line of anxious parents and children formed outside the palace.

Everyone was eager to get a seed and grow the best plant. Pingala, a poor farmer's son, was one among these children. He too got a seed from the king and sowed it in a pot in his garden. He took great care of the seed.

How many days will it take for a seed to sprout?
What care will you give to grow a seed into a plant?

The Disappointment

Pingala watered and manured the seed.

But the seed did not sprout. Pingala changed the soil and transferred the seed to another pot.

Weeks and months passed. One day Pingala went near the pot. He knelt before it. 'Dear seed, three months have passed. I want to take you to the palace. Please sprout out by tomorrow.' But nothing happened.

The next day he saw children walking to the palace, dressed in their best clothes. They all held well-grown plants. Pingala stood watching them sadly.

Will Pingala go to the palace?
What will be his thoughts?

To the Palace

Pingala's father had observed his son working hard to make the seed sprout.

He felt sorry for Pingala. 'Why don't you go to the king with the empty pot?' he asked. 'At least he will know, you tried your best.' So Pingala too put on his best clothes and started off to the palace.

He joined the others outside the palace, holding the empty pot in his hand.

The other children laughed at him, but Pingala ignored them.

What did Pingala's father suggest to him?

Why did the other children laugh at him?

Will he go back home disappointed?

Lovely Flowers

The king arrived and looked at the plants.

Children gathered in the courtyard of the palace with flowery pots. Red, blue, yellow.... The courtyard had turned into a bouquet.

The king looked at the children. Their faces were shining with hope.

‘Hah!’ the king sighed. He was not at all happy.

Why was the king unhappy?

What did he expect from the children?

Empty Pot

At the end of the line stood Pingala. When the king reached him, he stopped.

‘Why did you come with an empty pot, my child?
Did your seed not grow into a plant?’

Will the king be angry with Pingala?

A Smile

Pingala held his head down and said, 'Forgive me, Your Highness. I tried my best to grow the seed. I gave the best soil and manure to it. But the seed did not grow.'
A smile appeared on king's face.

Why did Pingala hold his head down?
Why did the king smile?

The Prince

He hugged Pingala and announced,
'Here is the crown prince! I had given everyone roasted seeds, which would never grow. Only this boy is honest.
I am sure, one day, he will rule this kingdom justly.'

The king gave roasted seeds to the children. Yet they came up with flowery plants. How did they grow the plants?

Have you ever sown a seed?
What things are needed for the growth of a seed?
Let's read this poem.

Seeds

A little seed for me to sow
A little earth to make it grow
A little hole, a little pat,
A little wish, and that is that,
A little sun, a little shower
A little while and then a flower!

Recite the poem once again.
Identify the rhyming words in the poem.

Now, write them down.

_____	_____
_____	_____
_____	_____

What are the things needed for a seed to grow?
Complete the word web. One is done for you.

Read and enjoy the song.

Oats, Peas, Beans, and Barley

Chorus

Oats, peas, beans, and barley grow,
Oats, peas, beans, and barley grow,
Do you, I, or anyone know how
Oats, peas, beans, and barley grow?
First the farmer sows his seed,
Then he stands and takes his ease,
He stamps his feet,
And claps his hands,
And turns around to view his land.

Chorus

Walking with a partner,
Walking with a partner,
Make a ring, oh make a ring,
Oh, while we happily dance and sing.
Then the farmer waters the ground,
Watches the sunshine all around,
He stamps his feet,
And claps his hands,
And turns around to view his land.

TEACHER'S PAGE

You may go through the details given below. This will help you to handle the class in an effective manner. These are general instructions. Detailed instructions for processing each text and activity will be given in the Teacher Text.

How to process the text

You may introduce the stories given along each unit, initiating a discussion by showing a picture, a video or a slide related to the theme or asking the learners to do an interesting activity. You may lead the discussion based on the themes of the stories like value of truth, attitude towards agriculture, empathy with fellow beings, helping mentality, love for animals and birds, need for parental love and care, etc. The stories are sub-divided into smaller units and separate titles are given. Moreover, on every page you can see questions for interaction with the learners. These questions serve certain purposes:

- To comprehend the reading text (e.g. What was the hobby of the king?)
- To read the picture (e.g. What happened to the trees?)
- To lead them to an activity (e.g. What were Pingala's thoughts?)
- To connect the learner's own experience with events, persons, places or objects described in the text (e.g. If you get a seed what care will you give to grow it into a plant?)
- To help learners predict what is going to happen (e.g. Will he go back home disappointed?)

Sometimes the learners may respond to the questions you pose in English, in their mother tongue. Then you may megaphone the answers and write them on the blackboard or a chart paper. Care should be taken to write the letters legibly and neatly. You may ask the learners to use words to form meaningful sentences. Then, you may read aloud the text you have written with correct pronunciation and intonation, pausing at meaningful chunks.

How to interact with learners

Meaningful interaction with learners is the key to language acquisition. You may resort to simple English for classroom interactions by using expressions like:

- Why didn't you come yesterday?
- Why are you late?
- What is special about this day?
- Did you read the newspaper?
- What are the main headlines?
- Please show me your notebook.
- How is the story?

The questions will be better understood by the learners if asked in meaningful contexts. But you can also use the mother tongue to give detailed instruction to do a task or play a game. Encourage learners to talk about their habits, likes, dislikes, favourite people/things/places, the stories they have read, the films they have seen etc.

How to deal with language activities and theatre games

Simple theatre games and simple language activities are effective for helping the learners acquire a second language. All the activities are not intended to be attended at the end of the unit only. If you feel that some of the activities can be done while processing the story, you are free to do so. You may first present these activities as individual tasks with general instructions. If necessary, you can assign the task to pairs or groups. Working and playing together in small groups will promote effective interaction, togetherness and team spirit. Theatre games also trigger the learners' imagination and make learning a pleasurable experience.

How to conduct learner assessment

Learner assessment is a continuous process and an integral part of learning. You can assess your learners at each stage of the learning process. Informal interactions, interactive questions, reading of the text, discourse writing, language activities, choreography and theatre games give you ample opportunities for assessing your learners. Apart from these, there is a separate section in the textbook titled 'I can' at the end of each unit. It is meant for self-assessment of the learners. This will help the learner to introspect and see whether he/she has obtained the learning outcomes specified towards the beginning of each unit.

How to use information and communication technology

It is always a challenging task for a teacher to catch the attention of very young learners. Learners are exposed to the world of high quality digital audio-visual materials these days and attempting to teach them using only 'chalk and talk' may not turn out to be a fruitful exercise. So you must think about bringing effective audio-visual materials to the classroom. The internet is a rich source of such materials.

For example, the first unit 'The Seed of Truth' begins during the World Environment Day celebrations. You can catch the attention of learners by showing many posters available on 'Google Images' in order to introduce themes such as conservation of environment and the importance of agriculture. While they are at work, you can interact with them in simple English.

Most of the songs/poems included in the textbook are also available on 'YouTube'. The addresses of many such websites and YouTube are given in the Teacher Text.

What do you find here?
 Let's make a paper boat.
 Do you like the boat?
 Can you name the boat?
 Say something about your boat.
 Now, let's read the story of a paper boat.

Down the Stream

Anna gently walked towards the stream of muddy rain water. She bent a little and launched a paper boat. It sailed down the stream swiftly and proudly. She went on placing a number of paper boats in the stream. She was delighted. Suddenly, something horrible happened.

What could be the horrible thing?

An Angry Girl

A fat boy pounced on one of her boats and pulled it. He turned the boat upside down.

Anna stared at the boy. He was fat and dirty. He did not mind Anna's angry face. Anna ran home.

Why did the boy pounce on the boat?

What would Anna do now?

A Solution

Anna's aunt Arundhati was sitting in an armchair. Anna's face was red with anger. She pouted her lips and said.

'That naughty boy, he overturned my boat,' she said.

'Don't worry. I'll make another one for you,' Aunt Arundhati tried to console her.

'What if he takes that one too?'

'Ok then...I'll make a few more for you.'

‘What if he takes all of them?’

‘No, he won't. I'll make a few for him as well.’

‘But why should you make boats for him?’

‘He seems to be a poor child.’

‘Then...Why can't he make them himself? He is so big.’

‘May be no one has taught him how to make boats.’

‘Why? Doesn't he go to school? He is so rude.’

Aunt Arundhati just smiled.

What was Aunt Arundhati's response when Anna complained about the boy?

‘The boy is so rude.’ Why did Anna say so?

Aunt wanted to make paper boats for the boy too. Do you agree with her?

Good Guidance

In no time a boat was ready and then a few more. Finally, she gave all the boats to Anna and said, 'Here, go and have fun.'

Clutching the boats tightly, Anna started walking hesitantly towards the stream. The boy was still there. He looked at her curiously. Anna took out two not-so-good boats and held them out.

'Here you are.' She handed the boats over to the boy without the trace of a smile. The boy took them and just stood there quietly. He did not know what to say.

A True Friendship

Anna gently launched her boat. Swiftly the boat sailed down the stream. The boy stood there watching it. A faint smile appeared on his lips!

Anna looked at the boy through the corner of her eyes. Suddenly she saw the boat getting caught in a heap of mud and stones. Water splashed against it and slowly flooded it. In a flash, the boy jumped into the stream and pulled the boat out of the water. He gave it to Anna.

She took the boat and smiled. The boy smiled back pleasantly. Anna gently placed another boat in the stream. It sailed swiftly and drifted past. Soon it was out of sight.

Anna and the boy looked at each other and smiled.

What made Anna happy?

Why didn't the boy destroy Anna's boats?

Here's a poem in which we see a boy making paper boats to float down the stream.
Read and enjoy the poem.

Paper Boat

Day by day I float my paper boats one by one down the running stream.

In big black letters I write my name on them and the name of the village where
I live.

I hope that someone in some strange land will find them and know who I am.

I load my little boats with shiuli flower from our garden, and hope that these blooms of the dawn will be carried safely to land in the night.

I launch my paper boats and look up into the sky and see the little clouds setting the white bulging sails.

I know not what playmate of mine in the sky sends them down the air to race with my boats!
When night comes I bury my face in my arms and dream that my paper boats float on and on under the midnight stars.

The fairies of sleep are sailing in them, and the lading is their baskets full of dreams.

Rabindranath Tagore

Who floats the paper boats down the stream?

Who sends the clouds to race with the boats?
What are the child's dreams about the paper boats?

A Soothing Song

In Russia, there lived a rich merchant.
He had a servant, a bright and brave boy called Ivan.
The merchant was a cruel man. He made Ivan toil from dawn to dusk.
Ivan had no time to rest.

Tired after heavy work, Ivan would lie on his bed. Then a nightingale would start singing sweet songs to him. Every night the nightingale used to sing for him. He could never see the nightingale as it was dark outside. But its song soothed him to sleep. ‘What a lovely song! How beautifully it sings! But what is the meaning of its song? I wish I could understand the language of birds.’ Ivan would think.

Why did Ivan wish to understand the language of birds?
Have you ever listened to the song of a nightingale?

Little Birdies

One day the merchant sent Ivan to the forest to fetch firewood. Soon the winds rose, the sky became clouded, the lightning flashed, the thunder roared loudly, and the rain fell heavily. Ivan soon ran to the shelter of a large tree. He saw a big nest on one of its branches.

Four small birds were there in the nest and there was no one to protect them from the wind and rain. Ivan felt pity to them. He climbed the tree and covered the little ones with his clothes.

When the thunderstorm was over, the mother bird came back.

What would the mother bird do?

The Teaching Bird

‘Thank you, Ivan. You protected my little children from cold and rain and I wish to do something for you. Tell me what I can do for you.’

Ivan was surprised to see a talking bird.

Ivan answered; ‘You know our language. Will you teach me your language, the language of birds?’

‘Stay with me for some days and you shall know it as we do.’

Ivan remained in the forest for a few days.

He learned the language of birds from the mother bird.

Ivan returned home happily.

How many languages do you know?

Do you speak with your pets? How?

The Secret

That night Ivan was listening to the song of the nightingale. Now he could understand its meaning. Ivan spoke to the bird in its language.

‘How did you learn our language?’ Flying towards him, the nightingale asked.

Ivan told the whole story to the nightingale.

‘I have a secret to tell you,’ the bird said.

‘What is it?’ Ivan asked.

The bird whispered the secret in Ivan's ears.

‘Ivan...,’ the merchant called him.

The nightingale flew away.

What could be the secret told by the nightingale?

A Strange Prediction

‘Who were you talking to?’ the merchant asked.

‘I was talking to a nightingale.’ Ivan replied.

‘Talking to a nightingale! How can you do that?’

‘I have learned the language of birds.’

The merchant stared at Ivan in disbelief.

‘What were you talking about?’ asked the merchant after a moment.

Ivan was worried. He spoke in a broken voice.

‘The nightingale said that I would become a king and you would become my servant!’

Do you think the merchant will like what the bird said?

Will the merchant be angry?

What will he do?

Into the Deep Sea

The merchant was worried and remained sleepless for weeks. One night the merchant gave Ivan a drink to make him drowsy. When Ivan had fallen asleep, the merchant laid him on a boat.

He spread the white sails, and pushed the boat into the open sea.

What would happen to Ivan?

Message from the Cranes

For a long time, the boat moved about on the waves and finally hit a large ship. The crew on the ship saw Ivan and felt pity for him. They took him to the ship. Standing on the deck, Ivan looked at the sky.

High, very high, up in the sky, Ivan saw some cranes. The cranes were predicting a storm.

He said to the sailors, 'Be careful; I hear the birds predicting a storm. Let us enter a harbour or we'll be in danger.'

'You silly boy, keep quiet!' The captain of the ship said. But Ivan requested him again and again.

Why didn't the captain listen to Ivan's words?

Will the storm break out? Why?

The Storm

At last the captain steered the ship to the shore and anchored it. Within a short time, a storm broke out. Huge waves rose up to the sky. The wind roared. They saw huge waves breaking many ships sailing in the sea.

‘You saved our lives,’ the captain thanked Ivan.

The storm destroyed many ships sailing in the sea. How does a storm affect a shore?

Noisy Birds

The king of the country was very much annoyed. Many crows perched on the windows, walls and roof of the palace and even on the trees nearby.

No one knew how to get rid of them.

Ivan went to the palace. ‘Your Majesty, I’ll get rid of the crows.’ Ivan said.

‘If you can do that, you can marry my daughter,’ the king said.

Ivan asked the servants to open the windows.

He listened to the crows for a while.

Then he went to the king again.

How will Ivan get rid of the crows?

What will the crows say to Ivan?

Homeless Birds

Ivan bowed before the king and said, 'Oh, Lord! The crows are homeless because your men are cutting down the trees they are living on. They want your men to stop doing it.' The king ordered his men to stop cutting the trees. The crows flew away one after another and disappeared. The king got the princess married to Ivan. Thus Ivan became the king. He ruled the kingdom wisely. Birds always warned him about storms and disasters and Ivan took immediate actions to save his people. 'Long live King Ivan!' People praised his wisdom.

What would happen if we cut down the trees?

A New Servant

Years passed.

One day an old man came to Ivan's palace.

Ivan ordered his guards to bring him inside.

The old man in shabby clothes appeared before him.

He was so tired.

'Dear old man, what can I do for you?' Ivan asked.

'Oh Your Majesty! I lost my wife and all my wealth. I find no way to make a living. I am old and cannot work. Let me stay here and serve you,' said the old man.

Ivan appointed him as his servant.

How will the old man serve the king?

The Nightingale is Back

One night Ivan was resting on his royal bed. He looked out of the window.

A full moon was rising. Little stars were blinking to greet the moon. A soft wind carried the fragrance of wild flowers into the room. From the distant skies Ivan heard the song of a nightingale. 'It's my nightingale.' Ivan stood up and went to the window. Soon the nightingale came to him and sat on the window sill. They spoke for a long time.

'As you said, I became the king. But what happened to the merchant?' Ivan asked.

'Oh Your Majesty! He is in your palace and he is serving you.' Saying this the nightingale flew away and disappeared into the sky. 'Your Majesty, supper is ready.' Ivan looked at the old servant at his door. He could not believe his eyes. It was his old master!

Did Ivan recognise his old master?

What would Ivan say to his old master?

You have read the story of Ivan who knows the language of birds.

Do you like talking to birds? Do you wish to fly like birds?

If you could fly, what would you do?

Let's read a poem about a child who likes to fly like a bird.

If I could Fly

If I could fly, I would fly so high
Up into the bright blue sky
I'd ride on rainbows and float with the clouds
And give the sun a kiss.

If I had wings like a beautiful bird
I'd soar through the air with the greatest of flair
I'd see all the mountains and trees from above
And the big blue sea.

So fly, fly, up into the sky
And dream, dream that you have two wings
Just close your eyes and imagine your wings
And fly away with me, and fly away with me.

Now we can fly up into the sky
We just close our eyes and dream for a while
We'll ride on rainbows and float with the clouds
And give the sun a kiss.

Now let's fly even higher than the sky
Until we reach the moon
And we'll fly around the stars that shine bright
In the sky at night.
